Every 7th Person in U. S. Has a Telephone.

The United States' position as the country with the best telephone service is emphasized once more with figures that show its magnitude.

Every seventh person in the United States has a telephone, according to statistics published by the Pennsylvania Public Service Information Committee. The average number of local connections daily last year was 41,000,000, and of toll connections 1,683,000.

The length of exchange wire at the end of the year was 29,954,586 miles, and of toll wire 4,569,236 miles.

The system on March 1 had 298,757 registered stockholders, compared with 281,149 on December 31, an increase of 17,608 in two months—the largest shown by the company for a similar period.

—Harold S. Trump, of Mont Claire, N. J., spent several days this week at the home of Prof. and Mrs. Albert Billheimer, Springs avenue.

Fifteen prisoners were before the Court on last Saturday, the last day of the April Court, for sentence. Eight of the number were charged with offenses involving violation of liquor law, to which they had entered pleas of guilty. Some of prisoners were represented by counsel.

William Shields was the first one called. He had pleaded guilty to two charges, one for operating a still at his home on Buford avenue and a month later he was caught operating a still at the home of Anthony Deardorff in Mummaburg. In mitigation of sentence, Wm. Hersh, Esq., called the Court's attention to the fact that defendant was the father of four daughters and two sons, and that he had borne a good character previous to this offense and was 57 years of age. The fact that after his first offense he had gone to the home of Anthony Deardorff and was caught in the second act was an aggravation of the offense. The explanation that whiskey had been prescribed for him by a physician in Waynesboro, was not calculated to help the case, as the prescription had been given following attack of the flu several years ago, and the Court doubted that he consumed a! the liquor he made, as he had a four gallon still, which was operated each week or so and not less than a gallon of whiskey made each time.

At conclusion of the hearing the Court remarking that they were convinced that the whiskey was manufactured for more than individual consumption, sentenced the prisoner on each charge to six months in jail and $100 fine and the costs, the full sentence being a year in jail and $200 fine.

Joseph Galbraith was next one called and was represented by C. S. Duncan, Esq., and in plea for leniency attention was called to the charge that defendant was found in possession of a small quantity of liquor. The Court in sentencing remarked that they were handing out punishment for helping in the distribution of liquor, and if proof could be made that such was error on their part the sentence could be modified. He was given six months in jail and a fine of $100.

Joseph C. Johns, alias "Chef" Jones, colored, was before the Court on two charges of having liquor in his possession and was represented by C. S. Duncan, Esq. In passing sentence the Court remarked that they were satisfied that in Jones they had one of the most notorious bootleggers in Gettysburg and for first offense he was given six months in jail and a fine of $300 and for second offense a year in jail and a fine of $300, or a total imprisonment of 18 months and fines of $600.

James Elloby, Claude Williams, Tom Brady, John Davis and Sam Johnson, all colored and train riding, were charged with larceny and were sentenced to 30 days in jail and to pay the costs.

Joseph McMaster was before the Court again on charge of operating a motor vehicle while under the influence of intoxicating liquor and was sentenced to jail for 30 days and a fine of $200.

Walter C. Knapp, of Seattle, Washington, was represented by R. F. Topper, Esq. He was a sailor and had just been discharged from a hospital and was without means and had taken some household furnishings from the property of Mrs. Carrie Pretz, on Buford avenue. He had worked for several citizens of the town, who spoke well of him and Mrs. Pretz joined in request for leniency. He was sentenced to six months in jail, a fine of $1 and the costs.

Ten of the prisoners were disposed of with jail sentences. The five remaining cases were continued for reasons appearing. William Thompson was charged with the illegal possession of intoxicating liquor. He was represented by Chas. S. Butt and claimed that the liquor did not belong to him, but was left there by Berkley Grove, who had removed to Virginia. He alleged he had behaved himself since he had been before the Court recently and neighbors were willing to testify that he bore a good reputation. Sentence was suspended until May 19, pending further investigation of the facts alleged.

Anthony Deardorff, charged with the illegal possession of intoxicating liquor was represented by J. Donald Swope, Esq., and the defendant declared he was not present in his house when William Shields was running his still. That Shields had asked him whether he had and cider and would like to have it racked off into apple-jack and he was willing to have this done, that he did not know anything about the still or where it came from except that he supposed Shields had brought it there. The case was continued until May 19 for further investigation.

John Worthle, charged with kindling fire, appeared and seemed mentally unsound and the Court ordered him to be returned to jail until further investigation was made and May 19 was fixed for final determination of case.

Ben Livelsperger, of Edge Grove, was charged with the illegal possession of intoxicating liquor. Upon motion the case was continued until June 16 on the representation that before that time his wife was an expectant mother and that the family consisted of four children ranging in age from 8 to 13 years. These allegations were supported by letter from the family physician.

George McKean, charged with the illegal possession of intoxicating liquor and disorderly conduct, was continued.

Bond of George Toddes of $1,000 posted by his brother, Eddie Toddes, for appearance of George Toddes to answer charge of violation of the liquor law, was ordered to be forfeited for non-appearance of the defendant.

Bond of H. E. Rebert, of near Littlestown, in the amount of $700 for his appearance in court, was also ordered forfeited. G. R. Thompson, of Gettysburg, being the bondsman.

Harry L. Wortz, of Adams county, was ordered by Judge McPherson to pay $2 a week for the support of his child. A charge of non-support had been laid against Wortz by his wife, Lulu E. Wortz. Wortz was also ordered to furnish bail in the sum of $300 to comply with the court's order.

Finds Rare Old Coin.

Last Saturday afternoon Milton R. Rimmel found a rare old coin while making some repairs to the gutter just in front of his residence on East Middle street. Mr. Rimmel had dug the ground away for a few inches preparatory to laying some bricks when the pick he was using struck a piece of metal. Picking it up he found an ancient coin, which upon being cleaned proved to be an Irish bronze half-penny of the coinage of 1781. On the one side are the words Georgius Rex III with the head of George 3rd in profile and on the reverse side the word "Hibernia," 1781 and the Irish harp surmounted by a crown. The surrender of Cornwallis having taken place in October, 1781, this coin bearing the date of the end of the Revolutionay War is a rare souvenir.

Robert Watson moved from his farm to Thurmont, Md., where he has purchased a large tract of timberland and is busily engaged sawing and hauling lumber. William Emory moved into the house made vacant by the removal of Mr. Watson. Rev. Charles Flohr and wife and Curtis Flohr, of Fountain Dale, and Mr. and Mrs. Willis Musselman and son, Sterling, of Fairfield, visited Mr. and Mrs. Charles Miller recently. Samuel Musselman, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Musselman, and Miss Nellie Sanders, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Sanders, were married at Harrisburg, last week by Rev. Shifer, the bridegroom's uncle. The bride is a graduate of the Fairfield High School. Congratulations from her correspondent. W. H.

ARENDSVILLE.

Carl Kane, of near this place, has put up a new barn on the site where his old one was burned down several months ago. Daniel C. Jacobs has the mechanics at work adding new additions to his home in this place. We notice that some of our citizens have had new roofs put on their dwellings. There are no new houses being put up in our town this summer. But we need more, but labor and material are so high that parties will not build. Mrs. Lloyd Garretson, of near this place, is going into chicken raising. She received 300 little chicks through the mail and William Starnier received 500. Harold J. Taylor, who is teaching school at Harrisburg, spent Saturday and Sunday in the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Taylor. Mr. and Mrs. Allen B. Trostle, Miss Sue Wolff and Misses Elizabeth and Edith Wolff, of Chambersburg, were recent visitors in the home of Dr. and Mrs. Wm. E. Wolff, in this place. The farmers are now busy planting corn.

Health Talk.

The health talk of the Pennsylvania Department of Health is prepared this week by Dr. J. Bruce McCreary, Medical Director, Bureau of Child Health. Dr. McCreary says: "In our last article, we told what a dreadful disease Diphtheria is. It can positively be cured by a good doctor if you will send for him in the beginning of the disease. "Last year of all the children that died from Diphtheria in the State, there was an average delay of 4 1/2 days before the doctors were called. "All the cases, where the doctors were called the first day and gave the cure, got well. "63 cases out of every 100 that died were neglected by the parents or those in charge of the children.

New American Cardinals

CARDINAL HAYES

The raising of Archbishop Hayes of New York and Archbishop Mundelein of Chicago to Cardinals of the Roman Catholic faith, amid a scene of splendor at Rome, now make the American Members of the Sacred College number four. The two others are Cardinal O'Connell of Boston and Cardinal Dougherty of Philadelphia.

"10 children out of every 100 that died from Diphtheria did not get the cure.

"This cure is called antitoxin and is positive when properly given on the first or second day of the disease. Be sure to call your doctor early and insist that he give your children antitoxin. "You should also keep the child in bed and quiet. "There is no danger from the antitoxin, but there is great danger from the heart if antitoxin is not given."

Next week we will tell how to prevent Diphtheria.

UPPER HUNTINGTON.

The Huntington township school board met on Saturday, May 3rd, and elected the following teachers: Rock Chapel school, Wilson Hummelbaugh; Hickory Point school, Dora Guise; Plank's school, Louretta Smick; Whitcomb's View school, Clyde Kennedy; Fickes' school, Frances Sloten; Miller's school, Mrs. Harry Miller; Pike school, Edna Albert; Sadler's school, Mrs. Mary Haskell; Idaville Grammar school, Louretta Rafensperger; Idaville Primary school, Irene Bushey. The school board levied 14 mills tax and three dollars head tax.

Mr. Parker Gardner, one of the supervisors of Huntington township, has greatly improved the roads in the upper end of the township during the last week by scraping them and making other improvements.

Mont Alto Forestry

The Department of Forests and Waters announces its third summer extension course in forestry and nature study which will be given at the Pennsylvania State Forest School, Mont Alto, Pa., from June 23 to August 1. The course covers 6 weeks, and is offered for the benefit of teachers, school supervisors, scoutmasters, and other lovers of the out-of-doors. The Forest School has an excellent equipment for teaching Forestry and Nature study. Bordered by the school is a forest of 23,000 acres and a forest tree nursery with an annual output of more than four million small forest tree seedlings.

And Nature Study.

Authorities on nature study work state that no other nature study course within the State offers such direct contact with natural objects through field studies and out-of-door excursions. This outdoor equipment adds much to the course, and being located in a beautiful forest park immediately adjacent to the school provides many recreational facilities which make the outdoor life very attractive. Accommodations for the students taking the summer course can be arranged for at a well equipped local camp.

Cal Overlooks Ruth—A World of Mystery

We Need Airships—A Human Bluebottle—Sodom Found

President Coolidge advises American women to vote, and interest themselves seriously in politics, and in maintaining our form of government.

Good advice. Luckily our form of government will maintain itself. And women are more and more taking an interest in politics.

Mr. Coolidge might say a few words to the men, millions of whom, presently, will forget all about the oil scandal, and everything else, because of their deep interest in Babe Ruth's home runs and similar important matters.

Out in the ocean, off Cape Race, is a gigantic iceberg, more than a mile long, towering a hundred feet in the air. To bump into it would mean destruction to any ship.

In old days men would have said, "Let us pray that no unfortunate ship will strike that fearful iceberg."

Praying is good, especially when accompanied by deeds. Now this Government sends the revenue cutter Modoc, to trail along beside that iceberg as it moves slowly and majestically to its melting place near the equator. And as the big iceberg moves, the little cutter broadcasts warnings, telling ships to keep away. That's a sign of civilization.

Mr. Le Boutillier is president of the Long Island Railroad. Nevertheless, a rude Government seized his private car, stocked with choice liquors, and threatens to seize and sell the car.

That is pushing prohibition beyond the joke stage. Keeping beer from workmen is all right. Keeping champagne from the president of a great railroad is quite another matter.

This is a world of mysteries. We send messages by electricity, and we don't know what electricity is—only what it does. We send radio music and messages through the air without wires and say it goes through the "ether." We don't know what the ether is, and cannot even prove that it exists.

Now Dr. Banting, a brilliant young scientist who discovered insulin, cure for diabetes, says that having discovered it, he is doing his best now to find out what it is. One thing is sure, it is an expensive product.

The school forest is equipped with forest fire observation towers, telephones, good roads, and numerous trails. Within a short distance of the school are extensive areas of old fields in which have been planted many different kinds of pine, spruce, oak, ash, and other important forest trees. In many ways the forest resembles the well managed forests of Europe. There is also a sawmill and a stove mill connected with the school, and on the State Forest is a timber cutting project in operation which produces 40 cords of wood each day.

Within ten minutes' walk of the school are more than 100 native woody plants, and a variety of wild life is plentiful in the nearby woods. In numerous mountain clearings within a short distance of the school can be seen daily as many as 40 deer in a group.

Authorities on nature study work state that no other nature study course within the State offers such direct contact with natural objects through field studies and out-of-door excursions. This outdoor equipment adds much to the course, and being located in a beautiful forest park immediately adjacent to the school provides many recreational facilities which make the outdoor life very attractive. Accommodations for the students taking the summer course can be arranged for at a well equipped local camp.

WASHINGTON INVESTIGATIONS.

Tribute to Walsh, and Rebuke for Coolidge.

U. S. Senator Robinson paid the following tribute to Walsh in the U. S. Senate within the past week:

"I say upon my responsibility as a public official and private citizen that in the roll of the Senate there is not an abler, braver public officer than Tom J. Walsh of Montana. From the hour when his skill revealed the baseness, the crookedness and the contemptible rascality of those who were stealing the property of the people of the United States he has been the target of every poisoned arrow that malice could design. Every act of his life, private and public, has been gone over in the hope that the 'low-down,' as one newspaper man expressed it, might be obtained against him, but with the army of Secret Service men, who ought to have been performing duties for the committee of which Walsh was the most active member, pursuing him by day and by night, with the agencies of the Department of Justice training against him, they found no act, public or private, which has reflected on him as a man or as an officer. Now, for political purposes, denouncing you Senators because you are unwilling to lend yourselves to cowardly practices, the Secretary of the National Republican Committee seeks to make the name and the performances of the Senator from Montana odious before the public.

"What has the Senator from Montana to accomplish by turning the light fully on Sinclair and Doheny? Nothing except the duty which he owed to his country and to his office, and that he has performed that duty with signal effectiveness is emphasized by the manner in which he is hounded by the agents of those whose conception of public office is the concealment of wrong, the covering up of fraud and the condoning of corruption.

U. S. Senator Carter Glass with becoming dignity and in temperate language expressed just indignation at the impudence of President Coolidge and his Secretary of the Treasury, Mellon, over the investigation, as follows:

"It seems to me, Mr. President, that Senate investigations, far from creating the condition graphically described by the President as 'lawless government,' have been fairly effective, and when the President angrily presents a contrary view he is enmeshed in his own criticism. It was a Senate investigation that sent Albert B. Fall to Three Rivers a disgraced man and a self-confessed felon. It was a Senate investigation that revealed the utter incapacity and indifference to public obligation of Mr. Denby, compelled by force of public opinion to retire from the Cabinet, despite his repeated denials and oft-avowed determination to remain in office. It was a Senate investigation that confirmed the popular conviction of Mr. Daugherty's unfitness for high distinction by revealing an official situation and personal contacts which literally shocked the nation and compelled his dismissal from the Cabinet. It was a Senate investigation that revealed the appalling condition of the Veterans' Bureau, with its frauds upon the Government, its immoral orgies, its wicked neglect of sick and disabled soldiers of the World War. The culprits, now headed for jail, will doubtless agree that Senate investigations are disturbing to the usual order of things. It was a Senate investigation that disclosed the criminal and fraudulent and sordid nature of the oil leases transactions which caused the Congress by sanction of the President himself, to direct recovery of public domain and the prosecution of the criminals. It is by reason of a Senate investigation that attorneys chosen by the President and confirmed by the Senate are this moment engaged in the prosecution of civil suits and criminal actions to restore the Government's proprietary rights and to punish the men who acquired them by means of bribery and corruption and the betrayal of public trusts.

"Rather should the Senate be commended by the President and the country for exposing a condition of lawlessness in Government which has disgraced one former Cabinet minister, discredited another, and confirmed the public detestation of a third. Rather should the Senate be thanked for its swift and earnest action to recover the nation's stolen wealth and to visit upon the thieves the severest reprisals. And unless the President of the United States desires to be regarded as a reluctant, rather than an eager, participant in this joint legislative and executive aggression, he must moderate the harsh condemnation contained in his message to the Senate and withdraw from a position which is not untenable, but positively distressing to his fellow citizens."

Senator Glass pre-eminently is

The following case is only one of many thousands, but it is that of a Gettysburg resident. Who could ask for a better example?

Mrs. H. H. Ridinger, 247 W. Middle St., Gettysburg, says: "I had a severe backache and weak kidneys and I don't believe any other medicine would give the fine results that Doan's Pills did. Doan's are the only kidney medicine that is used in our home and it never fails."

OVER FIVE YEARS LATER, Mrs. Ridinger said: "Doan's Pills drove away my kidney complaint. Although it is no longer necessary to use Doan's, I believe in them as firmly as ever."

Price 60c. at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Pills—the same that Mrs. Ridinger had. Foster-Milburn Co., Mfrs., Buffalo, N. Y.

He Was an Average Man

By JANE OSBORN

(© by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Reider Dawson sighed dejectedly as he looked first at one pretty face and then at another.

"Some way or other none of them seems to get me," he told the art chief who had strewn the drawings on Dawson's large flat-top desk for his inspection. "They are good drawings—pretty girls—but they don't appeal. It isn't the right type. Your artists haven't chosen models that appeal to the average man—and it's the average man we want to appeal to in advertising."

"You're the doctor," was the art director's reply. "Mr. Collins gave orders to leave the decision to you." He gathered the drawings together ruefully. "Just what type would you suggest instead? Of course, she must be pretty. In a soap advertisement like this we've got to have a pretty head. It seems as if these sketches represent almost every type of pretty girl there is."

Reider Dawson thought for a minute, let his gaze wander off to the skyline of gray buildings against a gray sky and sighed again.

You want a girl that looks as if she had good health, good sense and pep. Take a girl like that dietitian in there. Now, she's pretty, isn't she? Nine men out of ten would say so—but she's none of your baby-eyed, swan-necked, narrow-nosed creatures."

"Miss Hollis?" said the art chief, a little surprised, and then, "Yes, she is pretty, very pretty in her own way, but she isn't the pretty girl type, if you get the distinction; besides, I doubt whether she'd consent to having her face used as a soap advertisement. Still, I get your point."

The art chief may have understood Reider Dawson's criticism, but he was not at all cheerful or optimistic as he gathered the drawings he had collected together and left the room of the young vice president.

Then Dawson sat wondering if he had been too critical. He was frankly sorry that he had to put the art chief to the trouble of getting more sketches, but if it was true, as he had said, that Mr. Collins, the president, had left orders to have him pass on all sketches, then the only honest thing for him to do was to give his candid opinion.

He was just wondering, though, how much the weather and his own sense of loneliness had to do with his severity toward those insipid pretty faces when there was a downright sort of tap at the door and in walked Miss Hollis. She bore a small tray covered with a snowy napkin and there was a suspicion of steam coming from beneath its folds. Reider Dawson looked at her a little more closely than perhaps he should have done ordinarily—but now he was trying to justify himself in his statement that she was of the type of much stronger and wider appeal than these insipid girls the art chief had shown him. Yes, he had been right, perfectly right—hers was a convincing type of prettiness, as substantial and downright as the way she knocked at the door or the way she placed the tray on the table.

"I have brought you something to sample," she began, raising the napkin and letting out the aroma of well-brewed coffee, and something that smelled amazingly like the gingerbread that had been so dear to his heart as a boy. "You know we handle the advertising for the people that make Three X molasses. We're going to feature a big poster showing steaming gingerbread made with Three X. With it is to go a recipe for making the best gingerbread. I've been experimenting on an inexpensive simple recipe, and here I have narrowed down to two and I can't decide which is better. They are put together differently and the amount of flour and molasses is different. Perhaps you aren't hungry, but I'm so anxious to get your opinion."

"What's the coffee to do with it?" asked Reider, grinning and drawing up his chair before the table where the tray rested.

The dietitian blushed visibly. "Well, you see, gingerbread is rather dry eating without some beverage, and it seemed to me as if coffee went with it better than tea—and it's such a miserable day; but you don't have to drink it unless you want to. I made it from that Big Bear Brand coffee we do advertising for. It's not so bad for an inexpensive coffee."

After that Reider Dawson could not help but notice that very, very often Miss Hollis found excuse to bring her little sampling tray to his room. She was constantly working on recipes for the various food products for which the concern did advertising. Formerly when such tests had been made ten or a dozen of the office staff had been called into the dietitian's laboratory and then had followed a lengthy discussion of the merits of the various samples, but now seemingly she was playing favorites. And that was just what Reider Dawson hoped devoutly that she was doing. For Reider Dawson wanted to marry her and he didn't want to ask her if there wasn't a ghost of a chance that she would have him. He wouldn't much mind being turned down by some girls he told himself, but he never could go on working in the same office with Miss Hollis once she had rejected his suit. So Reider Dawson was going slowly. Meantime he was receiving an occasional bit of good-natured banter from Mr. Collins and others who counted themselves good friends among the executives of the company.

"She's a nice girl, and a pretty girl," Collins told Reider, "and the daughter of an old friend of mine. You'll have to go a long way before you find her equal. In the meantime you're getting all the gingerbread and pancakes and crullers and we're going hungry."

Reider Dawson continued, therefore, to feel hopeful. Still, there never seemed to be anything at all encouraging in Miss Hollis' manner toward him when she called with her little testing tray.

Reider determined to get his bearings. It was the last cold, damp day that March and Miss Hollis arrived with fresh, crisp, hot crullers and a cup of coffee.

"You don't know how much I appreciate this," said Reider. "But I'd be a lot happier if you brought in samples for two and sat down sociably with me."

"But there wouldn't be any object," said Miss Hollis.

"It would be sociable."

"But that isn't the object," said Miss Hollis in a most matter-of-fact way. "I'm trying to keep down expenses. I am sure you agree with Mr. Collins that that is important. It costs a good deal more to make enough gingerbread or crullers for eight or ten than just for you. I noticed that while the others used to disagree when I took a vote the majority decision was always identical with your selection. It happened time and again until I came to realize that you had a perfect average taste. You were, in other words, the average man, and it is the average man that an advertisement or any advertising campaign wants to get to. It makes things much simpler, besides less expensive. I told Mr. Collins and suggested this new plan."

"Then—then the only reason you've been bringing me all these good things," stammered Reider, "is because I'm average. What a fool I've been."

"I didn't say just that, but I've noticed in other things—in the books you like, the plays you prefer—that you are perfectly average."

"Thank you for your frankness," said Reider. "I am sorry I misunderstood. I—"

"Well, Mr. Collins agrees with me, too," said Miss Hollis, a little nettled. "In fact he gave orders to the art department to depend on your judgment as final in the selection of all advertising pictures—that's why they—"

"That's why they asked me about the picture for that new soap advertising campaign," continued Reider, "and it's because I'm average that I told them that a face like yours was prettier than any their artists had drawn—"

"I suppose so," admitted Miss Hollis.

"Well, I'm glad to know how you rate me," snapped Reider, biting viciously at a crisp cruller. "I'm glad, too, to know why you have honored me with these good things. I thought you perhaps cared—now I know you consider me nothing but average—commonplace."

"I didn't say commonplace," defended the girl. "It's nice to be average. I'd rather marry an average man than any other sort. Oh, that's not what I meant to say at all." Reider jumped to his feet, narrowly avoiding upsetting his cup of steaming coffee.

"Maybe it isn't what you meant to say," he cried excitedly. "But it's what you said. You know how I feel about you—"

"I've had a sort of an idea," said Miss Hollis.

"Then why in the world won't you marry me?" said Reider heatedly. "Because you never asked me."

This much of the conversation in excited voices penetrated the partitions into Mr. Collins' office.

"That isn't just the way the average man proposes," he said to his stenographer. "But I'll bet we'll have to look around for a new dietitian."

STOPPING WASTE OF WATER

City Lunchrooms Have Cut Down Size of Glasses, and the Saving Is Considerable.

People who look upon water that flows through the hydrant as of no value will be interested to learn that the large lunchrooms in the cities have reduced drinking glasses in size so that water, which costs them a good deal, may be saved.

The new water glass, observes the Kansas City Times, is about half the size of the old-fashioned tumbler. It is made so, not to prevent the customer from drinking all the water he may desire, but to assure that he will not draw more water than he will drink so that the residue left in glasses shall not be wasted. The manager of a big lunch room in St. Louis said when questioned on the subject: "We use pure filtered ice water here. It costs the city money to impound, pump, purify and distribute, although our patrons may not realize it. Now, we don't begrudge it to those who want it, but we've found that the average patron will fill a large tumbler to the brim and leave half of the water. Our midget tumblers do away with the waste. They contain just as much water as we have found the average patron drinks with his meals."

Not Used to It.
